

The Bank Committee have been actively engaged in the prosecution of their duties ever since they arrived. Determined to devote themselves to business, they have declined all invitations to partake of public festivities, a course which, though it may occasion some regret to the many who were anxious to offer tokens of their esteem, is highly praiseworthy.—Sat. Courier.