

A letter from Washington says—"I expect that Mr. M'Duffie will concentrate his energies on the two great questions committed to him--the United States Bank, and the amendment of the Constitution. Whether the result may prove this to be a waste of his energies, or whether such application of them may eventuate in any scheme of practical utility, can only be settled by the experience of the next half century."