

THE DIFFERENCE.—The Majority of the Bank Committee presented only the facts in relation to the Bank transactions, without comment, and without an attempt to draw conclusions, either for the house or for the public. The Minority, with the separate aid of Mr. Adams, have written twenty-three columns, not to disprove or controvert the facts, but to draw and make conclusions, and to explain away the facts. They dare not trust the congress or the people, with the facts, without a labored attempt to mystify or pervert them, and they dare not trust the people to draw their own conclusions. Now, which wears the appearance of honesty or fairness in this matter? And which will the people believe?
