

Bank Committee.—“ We are informed from a source entitled to credit, that the committee now sitting at Philadelphia, are working men. Having provided themselves with a room at the Hotel, they devote their whole time, except what is required for meals, &c. to the object of their mission. They decline all invitations, both public and private, to dine out, and prosecute their labors with the utmost zeal.— Nothing, it is said, has escaped them in the progress of their examination, of the results of their researches, or the probable time when they will close.”

The above is from the New-York Daily Advertiser. Its statement is true. The Bank Committee have been indefatigable in their labors from the moment of their arrival in this city. They are engaged in the investigation about seven hours each day, and what, with hasty visits from friends, and a glance at the newspapers, they have not a moment to spare. Nothing has transpired as to the results of the investigation. A great many rumors are in circulation upon the subject, but all of them are vague and probably unfounded. The truth is, it is the duty of the Committee to pore over the books of the institution, and to examine into the management of its affairs, but that any thing can be discovered discreditable to that management, or any important matter not already known to the public, we do not believe.—Philadelphia Inquirer.
